

What's on Your Radar? Trends, Emerging Technologies, and Brushing Up on Basics

Executive Summary

Keeping up with new technologies and ideas in L&D is a daunting task. While attending The Guild's recent Learning Solutions 2022 conference, I realized there were quite a few presentations on material I knew too little about. Some presenters discussed niche topics, like micro-credentialing. Others offered a deeper dive into tools I knew of but hadn't fully explored, such as Miro and AI content generators. Some extended an idea with which I was familiar, while others gave a glimpse into the future. A few invited a revisit to those things we think we know.

I invited the presenters from some of these sessions to recap their presentations—not just repeating what the conference session descriptions promised attendees, but what those who did not attend a session might have missed. Here are their answers, supplemented with a few I wrote up myself. We hope this report helps you see some new things that should be—or will be—on your radar in the next few years.

—Jane Bozarth. To download the full report, click here.